Goodman.ArchCare@goodmanmedia.comARCHCARE TO ROLL OUT NEW EMR SYSTEM IN ALL NURSING HOMES

Installing WellSky to Streamline Electronic Medical Records Across the System, Allowing for Enhanced Care

NEW YORK, NY (July 15, 2021) – ArchCare, the Archdiocese of New York’s healthcare system that every day cares for more than 9,000 seniors, the poor and persons with special needs, recently procured the WellSky Electronic Medical Records (EMR) system, a software system that is designed for senior care management, for all of its nursing homes. WellSky allows for a faster and more streamlined exchange of information, increasing a system’s efficiency and improving value.

“The ability to easily share critical medical information with trusted sources is vital to creating a more efficient care community,” said Scott LaRue, President and Chief Executive Officer of ArchCare. “Utilizing WellSky will allow us to provide an even better healthcare experience to our residents and program participants, as well as improve our ability to better manage clinical outcomes.”

The WellSky program will not only maintain a patient’s medical records, but also their billing information, as well as referral partners, allowing for a more organized source of information for caregivers, and a more beneficial and stress-free experience for patients.

“This system enhances the way we can capture and utilize patient information, and, should the need arise, helps us to safely and securely transfer the records efficiently to other health care systems,” added Mitze Amoroso, Senior Vice President and Chief Information Officer of ArchCare.

ArchCare is expanding the WellSky long term care software system to all its nursing homes in Manhattan, the Bronx, Staten Island, and Westchester County.
